Police said the cause of death had not been determined.
The victims were described as a youngish couple. It apppeared, police said, that gasoline had been poured over the victims and inside the house, then ignited.

Neighbors said they heard an explosion that shook their houses and saw someone run from the house. $\mathcal O$

The victims, neighbors said, had moved in just before Christmas and had behaved oddly, so oddly that one neighbor notified authorities. But, he said, nothing was done.

The couple had many late callers, and no lights could be seen through blankets covering the windows. But a porch light was always on.

Meanwhile, RCMP in Surrey reported they had ar-rested a suspect Thursday in the murders of William Tup-niak, 27, and his fiancee, Marilyn Jean Cathers, 24.

A police spokesman said some property stolen from the Tupniak home, where the couple's bodies were discovered Tuesday, had been recovered. Other persons still are being sought in connection with the slayings.

Punishing Session Points to Polls

Other moves that hinted election strategy included restrictive legislation increasing fields. These followed closely on last years controversial cabinet attempts to strengthen the government's control in the health field.

VARIED CRITICS

Although alternately cri-ficized by teachers, civil ser-vants, school trustees, doc-tors, social workers and the poor, the measures were sold the public as attempts to con-trol inflation and rising government costs

Late in the session a bill was introduced by Labor Min-ister James Chabot to limit-restrictive clauses in labor-contracts but was withdrawn after an alarmed and angry labor movement promised to study-inter-union warfare in an effort to end jurisdictional work stoppages.

The unions said the bill amounted to "right-to-scab" legislation because of the extent of its restrictions. The government promised to bring in the bill next year if necessary.

The session tacked much of the bilterness expected of a likely pre-election legislature.

Indians Get Raw Deal: Leaked Report

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank Howard, New Demo-cratic Party member of Par-liament, has released four chapters of a secret report to the federal government which says Canada's Indians are cial returns to reserve lands.

The full report, titled Study and Quantitative Assessment of the Special Status, of Indians as Taxpayers and submitted to Ottawa in September, 1968, has not yet been released.

The report was prepared by Donald Fields, a professor at the University of British Co-lumbia, and graduate student William T. Stanbury at the request of the federal depart-ment of Indian affairs and worthern Indian affairs and

The four chapters obtained by Mr. Howard, who represents the British Columbia riding of Skeena, cover personal income tax of B.C. In-

B.C. reserves and sales tax.

Mr. Howard said in an interview he will demand in the House of Commons that the government release the full report. He decimed to say how he came by the four chapters he made available to a Vancouver newspaper.

Main points included in the

"Despite the progressive nature of the income tax the very heavy weighting of In-dian incomes in the lowest brackets has the effect of placing relatively more of the total income tax burden on low income Indians (under $3,000) than it does upon all low income taxpayers in B.C.," the report says.

The Continuing Challenge

It is perhaps a sign of our era. that the slightly brighter dawn of Easter Sunday this year will be more properly ascribed to political than to moral improvement in the world. Observance of the religious precepts and moral guidelines of mankind have not changed appreciably during the past year, but the political climate which determines our hopes for international peace has taken a change for the better.

Whether man's moral nature has influenced his political nature, or vice versa, may be difficult to determine at this point. But in any case we may take encouragement from the fact that in a number of areas there has been a subsidence of fear and suspicion between nations, and an apparent increase in security and confidence in man's dealings across the arbitrary borders which govern his global

The useless destruction in Viet nam continues but it is becoming more localized, and the American withdrawal continues on schedule. The new United States-China relationship and China's presence in the United Nations promise an era of improved communication where it is most needed.

The tensions between Russia and the West have eased, and we appear to be on the eve of further advances in disarmament. West Berliners are visiting East Berliners; Britain is entering the European Common Market; many of the hot spots of former years: the Middle East, Bangladesh, Cuba, Algeria, the Russo-Chinese border, for instance, are relatively quiet, at least for the moment. There is definitely a more hopeful feeling in much of the world - which does not mean that its problems have been solved, but does suggest that they could be.

It would be encouraging to be able to say that these improvements in the world scene have been the result of a resurgence of moral strength around the globe, a fine fruition of united effort by the religions of the world. But although there is clear evidence that moral determination still survives in individuals, that the Golden Rule is applied by many men and women to their neighbors far and near, it cannot be shown that this spirit has reached national proportions in any country - that it has become the guideline for national policy anywhere.

The answer seems to lie rather in political exigence, in widespread fear; in a growing realization that a peaceful world is more operable in the nuclear age than a warlike one, and that mankind is now sharing a common apprehension that its planet may prove inadequate to sustain man's future.

The traditional challenge to the church still stands: to go into all the world . . . It is a challenge that will not be mastered in the basketball gymnasium, the day-care centre, the bingo hall or the marriage counselling office - even though these all have their place. It will have to be met in moral leadership that takes its stand on the great questions of the day, that applies a publicly proclaimed moral judgment even when this may be unpopular: on racial discrimination, on war and armaments participation, on political chicanery, on unworthy social conduct. Everyone knows where the church stood two thousand years: ago. Does everyone know where k stands today?

Archbishop Harold Sexton

People from all walks of life and different religious denominations will note the loss of a figure of forthright character, simple generosity, compassion and easy. friendliness in the death this week of Most Rev. Harold Sexton, retired Anglican Archbishop of British Columbia.

He will be remembered as much for the warmth of his personality as for the high office he attained in the church he served for a third of a century in this province. Outspoken on matters of principle no one was left in doubt of his stand on issues of: faith or of the day - he brought to his ministries a full recognition of human values and a sympathetic understanding of human strengths and frailties.

His early support of the ecumenical cause disclosed his thoughtful assessment of mankind and the desirability of accenting those elements it held in common, regardless of sectarianism.

Residents to whom he was once familiar on the streets of Victoria will regret the loss of a man who could walk with kings, nor lose the common touch.

In Their Easter Bonnets -

Not everyone enters the Easter Parade. Not everyone buys a new spring hat for the occasion. But the boulevards of Victoria, with pretensions to elegance, are preening themselves in new Easter bonnets of flowering trees - those attractive imports from Japan that

Is This the School's Job?

Since education moved from the general concept of the little red school house with its concentration on the Three R's, increasing pressure has been placed on teachers to provide guidance and instruction on a variety of subjects considered essential to society. The presumed answer to a multitude of problems has been education. In the majority of instances, the courses have proved their

A complex society requires speciallzed instruction for the young on matters frequently beyond the competence of their parents.

The schools are expected to open doors to their pupils for which their fathers and mothers have no keys doors, in fact, that did not exist at an earlier time because the chambers into which they give access had not even been contemplated. The problem arose long before the space age brought its miracles and mysteries for study by specialized individuals as well as by the public in general terms. The advance of technology made its demands. Who, in grandpa's boyhood, worried about radio, its mechanical requirements or broader human adjustment it imposed on people at large?

Parental Abdication

But while schools were responding to legitimate pressures, teaching, or attempting to teach, the young to meet the circumstances of their existence in a changing world, an accompanying development took place. Parents, in many instances, began to abdicate their own re-sponsibilities, leaving it to the school to assume the duties once considered the obligation of the home.

We have reached the point in this community at which some parents tele-phone some school principals pleading, or demanding, that they exert an influence on children for misdemeanors in no way connected with the classroom or the formal educational system.

The question arises: How far should schools go in accepting such responsi-

It seems to me the issue reaches a critical, point in the action of a Van-ing five members with drug experience, which recommended that schools start compulsory programs to teach young people the dangers of mixing drugs and how to give first aid for drug overdose.

The recommendations, said The Canadian Press, were part of a verdict that found the February 26 (Vancouver) death of 16-year-old June Dickinson resulted from "an overdose of heroin and, or, a reaction from a mixture of heroin

It. seams to me the generality of the proposal ignores some significant considerations. With exceptions so few that they do not alter the general picture. narcotic addiction is a one way journey to destruction. It is a trip into disaster which no one is required to take. Addicts are addicts, in the majority of cases, because they opted for drug use.

Surely the "instruction" that is needed is a perpetual admonition not to start the journey. The techniques of making own ticket and chose their own route seem a little more sophisticated than schools should be asked to master.

Hideous Lesson

The educative value, hideous as it may be, in the Vancouver incident rethe grotesque squalor of the child's death. A graphic presentation of that episode, cruel as it would be, could be more impressive to school pupils even the smart alecks among them than any amount of clinical instruction.

It is frequently argued that narcotic addiction is an illness rather than a crime. The argument stands on its ov merit but it should be understood that except in rare cases, the illness is selfced. It is not a condition innocently created by a random germ.

In an area where medical evidence is contradictory, even in such subdivisions as the so-called "soft" drugs, the only certain means of avoiding the results of addiction lies in avoidance of the narcotc itself. This may run contrary to the belief of some members of the drug culture, who accept use of various narcotics as a commonplace of the times. To those who subscribe to this cuit, it may seem normal to ask the schools to provide aid and comfort to those of their fellows who encounter difficulties that can be fatal.

public if it wishes to finance that aid and comfort and to accept the self-inflicted injury caused by narcotics as an issue for easy tolerance - or even uneasy tolerance - with an additional, extraneous burden imposed on the schools.

If you look into the tide pools you can find a few-sea animals, but this area has very little normal sea life.

Look at the old fir trees that are growing at the shoreline. See how twistgnarled and bent they are - all leaning towards the north. This is because of the prevailing south-west winds on this part of the coast. One wonders how they have survived. -

At the tide line you can find some of the deep water seaweeds washed ashore by the winter storms. There is the sea lace, stiff sea brush and the dark red blades of the sea fan. If you look on some of the blades you can find tiny little white dots that are shells of a small snail living on this medium. There are also the hard brittle "stalks" of the coral that have bleached white in the sun.

The drive out is itself well worthwhile for here you see the lush green mendows and the wonderful stands of Garry baks, and perhaps some white-faced cattle grazing - a truly pastoral setting enhanced by some very old barns that add Obviously he meant that I could make a lot of money. That was also the message of the organizers of the seminar where I was going to spend the day.

The affair was called Development '72. It was presented jointly by the University of Waterloo and the Canadian In-stitute of Quantity Surveyors.

The people attending the seminar were not, however, developers. If you are a land developer, you presumably learn the basics of your busi ness. They were, instead, mainly professionals involved one way or another in the land development business mostly engineers, architects, estimators, and real estate company employees. developer mentality is the as-sumption that the owner of an existing building should be able to do whatever he wants anie to do whatever he wants with it. This is almost always automatically translated into the right to tear it down, whatever its age, quality, or significance to the city. Buildsignificance to the city. Buildings are regarded as nothing more than machines to make money. Any other attitude was dismissed as mere emotion and sentimentality, weak nesses which developers have learned to deal with using pressure tactics on one hand and large quantities of money on the other.

buildings in downtown Toronto, panelist Gordon Gray, president of A. E. LePage Ltd. said: "I don't want to get involved in saying whether historical buildings are good

But his resentment of the idea that considerations of this kind should influence decisions about land development was clear enough. Referring to the last Eaton Centre project for Toronto, which involved Eaton's demolishing the Old City Hall, Mr. Gray said: "On the Old City Hall issue, out of the cracks emerged a million architects,"

No Responsibility

Coupled with this attitude that fand value is paramount was the implied view that everyone in the land development business is working within a system which is for example, no one in the land development business is responsible for the fact that down-town land in Toronto now can be worth $350 a square foot, $15,000,000 an acre. It is a fact of life, Like-wise no one is responsible for the set of circumstances which makes it more profitable to tear down high-rise office buildings like The Toronto Star building and to put up a new building on the land,

A second major element of the developer mentality could be regarded as an accurate extremendous respect for what is called the value of land, the potential every piece of urban land has for earning money. It was taken for granted that all others

But these city policies are usually made, in close con-junction with the land devel-opment and property-owning business, and people in the business sit on city council and on the planning board. Special advisory groups like Toronto's Redevelopment Ad-Toronto's Redevelopment Advisory Council and the Urban Development Institute are specifically set up to influence these public policies. Yet the developer mentality is set to ignore this pole that the land development industry has in making the rules by which the system operates. It is considered fixed, given, a constant ered fixed, given, a constant

Believe in Growth

A more familiar part of the mentality of developers is their unquestioned enthusiasm for growth, their assumption that it is both inevitable and highly desirable. The attitude is not, of course, limited only to people in the private sector of the business, Panelist R. J. Bower, Metro Toronto deputy

All an individual developer can do is choose among these established possibilities. It goes without saying that every one of them requires knocking down exist-ing buildings first, and starting with an empty site.

No doubt this strong cor ventionality is greatly strengthened by the practices architects, contractors and expect in the number from desee them doing now.

The fault, I think goes even further back: to the original concept of a university and pre-emindrily the University of Toronto, as an exclusive academy in which the sons of the merchant and industrial class are trained to take positions of responsibility in the business and professional life of the country.

Of course the university has come a fine way from that attitude; but it has not yet come all the way, which it must it it is going to escape further timewasting and destructive student outbreaks.

Atlin Grit Quits Post In Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) - Mel Couvelier, president of the British Columbia Liberal Party, said Friday that George Maczynski, recently-resigned president of the Liberal eral Association of the Riding of Atlin, had not held a riding association meeting for three years despite the pleading of provincial headquarters and other members of the riding

Couvelier was commenting on Maczynski's charge Wednesday that the Liberal andidate in the provincial riding was imposed on the area by party headquarters.

Maczynski, of Lower Post, also amounced his resignation Wednesday in protest of the conduct of a March 24 no mination meeting in Stewart.

Maczynski was considering seeking the nontination, but the meeting chose Basil Studer of Stewart as the candidate for the next provincial election.
Couvelier said Friday that

Maczynski had shown no in-terest in party affairs, "until just recently when it became obvious we have an excellent chance of winning tiffs seat of Atlin."

"This is the direct result of much effort from Liberals all over the riding — other than Maczynski."

His report is based on a single-case of gangrene of the hand in an LSD user. But, he said, there is sufficient evidence of the cause-and-effect relationship to warrant a warning to doctors and users of LSD that such a condition is possible.

The report, which appeared the inaugural issue of the teview of the hospital for Special Surgery, is by Dr. Allan E. Inglis, an orthopedic surgeon in New York.

The case involves a 24-year-

All provinces, except Alberta, are expected to impose the new gift tax, while the suc-cession duty legislation will only be enacted by the four Maritime provinces, Saskat-chewan and Manitoba.

Quebec, Ontario and British Columbia will retain their own succession duty systems for the time being, and Alberta intends to stay out of the field entirely.

Because of the Alberta move it may be only a matter of time before B.C., Ontario and Quebec rethink their positions. Ontario Tresurer Darcy McKeough has implied that on several occasions.

The new uniform Gift Tax Act, now being debated for second reading in the Manitoba legislature is, presum-ably, the model all nine prov-inces will adopt. If that is so, the model should be rejected and replaced with something of better quality.

Some comment on gift tax theory is in order. Gift taxes don't raise revenue — perhaps a few million dollars across the entire country. Their purpose is to prevent people from giving away their assets during their lifetime, so that wheri they die, their estates will be larger estates will be larger and the death taxes greater-This only works if the taxpayer is prepared to die where he lives. If not, he might spend his productive years in Saskatchewan then move to Alberta after retirement, in which case there will no death taxes levied on * his demise.

The most offensive aspect of the Gift Tax Act is that it is retroactive. Not only that, but it provides that the governat any time in the future make regulations under the act retroactively. Regardless of the protestations of provin-cial finance ministers, retro-active taxation cannot be con-

The scheme of the new law is fairly straightforward; All gifts made by a resident in the province are taxable. Gifts of up to $5000 to a spouse, plus gifts of $2,000 or less to individuals are exempt but the total value of exempt gifts cannot exceed $15,000 in any one year.

It will be interesting to see if all participating provinces stay within those limits, tax rates begin at 15 per cent and escalate to 50 per gent.

These few changes in them-self constitute a major rever-sal of the trend toward en-lightenment in tax legislation. The federal gift tax law since 1968 (now abolished) had permitted a taxpayer to make an unlimited number of tax free gifts if they were all under $2,000 each. More important the old law finally had recognized the fiscal equality of nized the fiscal equality less of whether or not the gifts are taxable. The old federal law required returns to be filed only if they were taxable. We are thus confronted with we are thus confronted with the ridiculous spectacle of every one having to keep books and file annually the details of his Christmas pres-ents, the birthday gifts he's made and such.

If this is a drafting oversight, a quick repudiation from government will be wel-come, but if it is intentional, one can assume that millio of taxpayers who don't read these laws, will become liable for the $10 per day fine the law imposes on those who fail to file a gift tax return.

If these were the only in-comprehendable features of the new gift tax system, it would be bad enough. But

Too Long? Nope, Too Wide

The winds of war are very strong and very long. They blow through 800-plus pages of a book weighing several pounds, a book which an English reviewer called "a doorstep novel.

Herman Wouk's latest has been a best-seller so long great numbers of Americans must have galloped, and trudged, their way from the days of the "phoney war"

From 1939 to Pearl Harbor Wouk deploys a numerous cast of characters into every corner of Europe and America "where the action is." They are inside Germany in Warsaw when the first bombs fall, in Moscow when the Nazis were knocking at the front door, in Italy, and, finally on the hills above Pear Harbor watching mighty battleships go belly-up.

Work has many minor characters but it is with the great that he depicts intimacies. His hero, Victor Henry, a senior U.S. navy officer, gets around. As a confidential messenger of President Roosevelt, he talks to Hitler, Churchill, Stalin, and to slightly less prominent people by the score. He is familiar with the dexterity with which Roosevelt mixes a cocktail, with the rude frankness of Stalin and the stubborn fortitude of Churchill.

Meantime the Henry family — two boys and a girl — manage to emulate dad by getting to the hot spots when they are hottest. At times the nobility of purpose might remind you of Pilgrim's Progess with high explosive and ical use of natural imagery is illustrated in the collection "The Sea is also a Garden." Already in an earlier poem the moon had been stripped of romantic association: the enromantic association: the energetic, wryly humorous "Earth descending" had our planet taking a suicidal plunge from the moon's "nightly slightly sickening romances" and "high-tailing it the book. His base is Washington so he gets to know Roosevelt as well as anyone is allowed to know the president; but his real successes are scored abroad, where he interviews Hitler, makes Mussolini's eyes flash, chats with Churchill and has the Kremlin in a genial uproar."

Maybe his hero is just a little bit too good, too much trusted with secrets hot enough to burn a hole in a dispatch case. It is hard to imagine anyone being just THAT important. I read some of it with interest but I plodded through many pages. At half the length this book would be more gripping.

Tourists in British Columbia and Washington who follow routes pioneered by fur-traders occasionally curse the weather and the inconveniences of travel. Their good humor would be restored by reading the journal of Chief Trader John McLeod (1788-1849), who endured greatly in 1826. However restless and inconsiderate children in a modern car may be, they could never try patience as did the three calves McLeod had to carry in his boats while Indians threatened.

As Hudson's Bay Company officer in charge at Kam-loops, McLeod was ordered to take the annual express documents and packages across the mountains to the

He had to leave his comfortable home base and hurry down to Fort Vancouver, across the Commiss to present Portland, Ore., where he had his two boats loaded on March 20, 1826, and ordered them to push off in the afternoon in the midst of a downpour of rain, which seemed normal weather.

The river was dangerous with rapids, chutes, dalles where the water rushed through narrow channels be-tween high rock walls — and whirlpools, many of which have been eliminated by dams in recent times. McLeod knew the river from three previous journeys; even without the calves it would be no picnic.

Yet in a way McLeod welcomed the challenge. Governor George Simpson two years before had blasted HBC men west of the mountains. He said they had become soft. He accused them of wastefulness, induigence in European Company of the ropean luxuries — "Eatables, drinkables and other do-mestic comforts" — and too much attention to their squaws and children instead of company business.

Simpson, just made head of the company's northern department, had started his ruthless march to the top.
Proud John McLeod, an energetic warrior in the HBC in 1821, squirmed over the Simpson criticism. There was also a specific complaint against him — at the 1825 council of HBC officers he had been accused of mismanaging his district and failing to produce enough profit.

For a man who had been honored with the rank of chief trader, who had fought a duel with a North West postmaster (neither hurt) and who felt he was on the safe highway to promotion and prestige, the criticisms were postmaster (neither hurt) and who telt he was off the safe highway to promotion and prestige, the criticisms were infuriating. Now he had the chance to prove he was not soft and his journal in the B.C. Provincial Archives shows how hard he tried.

The three calves were accustomed to the good pastures around Fort Vancouver. They were large, healthy and unco-operative. Three pigs, too, were put on board for a journey of about 600 miles; McLeod seldom mentions them; the calves were the problem.

The day after the start McLeod woke up to find two crewmen missing; they had returned to the fleshpots of Fort Vancouver, When they got back, a late start was made in the boats, amid continuing rain, and McLeod wrote that he feared the calves would die of cold or hunger.

The beautiful country between Fort Vanoouver and Fort Okanagan, the latter some 50 miles south of what was to be the Canadian border, was inhabited by untrustworthy Indians who soon were attracted by the loaded boats and the promise of loot; and by the calves which would be a fine change from their fish diet.

McLeod hurried the galves across portages and put an armed guard beside them at night. On March 24 they

One Indian put an arrow in his bow and aimed it at David Douglas, a British botanist who was travelling with McLeod. Douglas picked up his gun and aocked it, which made the bowman hesitate.

Two of the Hawaiian members of the boat crews also cocked their muskets. McLeod, accompanied by Francis Ermatinger, his second-in-command, advanced on the Indians, both with guns cocked.

This was how HBC men were expected to act in a tight corner — firmly, calmly, neyer striking the first blow. They edged the Indians away from the baggage. Douglas and McLeod then ran along the shore to protect the calves until they were put aboard the boats

The snow was down to the water edge in some places but their tracks were not found and McLeod feared they had fallen into the river. For two hours in the darkness all hands hunted the calves and found them safe, then cut enough grass to let them eat while tied up, and retired to their blankets, much fatigued.

On April 7, McLeod turned the calves to the charge of the officer at Fort Qkanagan. The animals did well and are regarded as the foundation stock of the Upper Colum-

"I went out early," he said. "My motor had been giving me some trouble; I had it fixed, and I wanted to take a quick spin see it everything was all right. So I took a run over to Mill Bay. I always had good success fishing there especially when Bill Hoskyn was around here.

"Bill used to tie his own flies, and when he was in a good mood he'd let me have one or two. I remember once I was out with a couple of kids in a junior derby; we saw Bill over by Mill Bay, and one of the kids said: 'he's bucktailing'; and sure enough Bill was fishing light and had a couple of coho in the boat. We had nothing.

"Naturally I switched, and pretty soon we had a couple on, and then in the boat. And that was a surprise!

10 years since Bill left town.

"But by golly there was one—a green and white. It wasn't much, for sure. The rust from the hook had discolored the polar hair, and the hook, ugh! It wouldn't hold much, not even a grilse; so, I changed it. Then I thought: why not try it? After all, Bill fied a good fly.

"I had just put the line out, and said to my fishing buddy

"I wasn't sure what I had, but I knew it was the biggest.

"I figured I had got about 100 yards of line back when suddenly the fish decided to sound. And sound he did. I was afraid to try and move him. After all, I only had a 10-pound test line, a four-pound test leader, and that wretched old fly; and I didn't want to lose this one. And so we walted.

"Suddenly, there was action again. Off the fish took, we after him. Sure glad I had that motor fixed. We did a turn around MacKenzie Bay, spotted a couple of racoons peering at us from the underbrush, and then started up past The Boulder, towards Willis Point.

"When we got near shore, George jumped out, stood waist deep in that freezing water, and I manoeuvred the boat close to shore. And I have to give George full marks. He stood perfectly still in that ice-cold bay until the fish came alongside. Then he hand-gilled him. It was beautiful!

The lucky angler, Stan Williams, admitted that he had played the fish for nine hours. And as Stan is basically honest and forthright, his story is hereby repeated.

And as we went by Bamberton, all I was concerned with getting some line back on my reel. "We were moving at a pretty good clip — there was only one other boat out there; that was guide Jim Gilbert — and I gave him the high sign 'bucktail on top' (always glad to help a guide), and down to McCurdy Point the chase continued.

'There was Gilbert again. I gave him the signal 'same fish'; he shook his head in disbelief, countered with an insulting

Double Concert Ends Music Year at UVic

The University of Victoria's department of music will present its third annual year-end concert next Thursday and Friday. Because these concerts have been so well-received in previous years, the university will offer two performances this year.

Uvic music department chairman Phillip Young feels that "in many ways this is consedered the highlight of the university musical year."

The concerts will be performed by the University Chorus, comprised of some 220 singers, and the University Chamber Orchestra, augmented with professional musicians from the Victoria community to make an orchestra of 50 members. Both chorus and orchestra are directed by Dr. members. Both chorus and orchestra are directed by Dr. George Corwin. Featured soloists will include Catherine Young, soprano, Elinor Bertram, contralto, Arthur Wiebe, tenor, and Ron Bermingham, bass.

Pieces to be performed are Mozart's "Requiem" and "Solemn Vespers of the Confessor." The "Requiem," Mozart's last work, is one of his most beautiful works for chorus and orchestra.

Curtain time is 8:00 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for students. Tickets are available from members of the hard autinomatic and the state of the stat chorus, the UVic music department office (in the MacLaurin buillding) and at the door.

All proceeds from the performances will go to the Taylor Scholarship Fund which is awarded to outstanding music

Into Depths of Dali's Netherworld

If Salvador Dali is not the only surrealist in the world he is certainly the most prolific and most flamboyant. His imagery has had a profound effect on modern art. His influence continues.

This critic once judged a competition of high school art and was amazed at the number of street number of students interested in Daliesque concepts. Dali researches the netherworld of the deep psyche. And adoles-cents in search of themselves look to Dali and his method to fathom their own master's art.

If Dali had influence, he also absorbed influence and the most powerful on Dali was the thinking of Sigmund Freud. At the Canada Arts. Gallery on Douglas, there are prints from the Casanova Series. Overtly sexual, the series tackles the gootesque and frightening eroticism of the imagination. These graph-ics would complete the Freudian textbook.

Enn Erisuluo I Canada Arts has purchased two other sets of Dali p rints. There is a series entitled Much Ado-About Shakespeare, etchings which play upon Elizabethan imagery, and a series of Fruit etchings

The quality of the Fruit series must be seen. These are workshop prints where Dali has an army of skilled printers realizing his designs. The works are beautifully col-ored. Forms have been embossed into the paper by means of a special relief printing plate which actually molds the paper to sculpture the printed form.

Dali has taken images of fruit, grapes, leaves, and apples which are illustrative; as though taken from a magalife. A branch of grapes be-comes a running man, A bush of leaves becomes a seated of a mountain and seen the view, what do you do?

ANNE MURRAY ... a lonely job

If you're singer Anne Murray, you look around for another mountain to climb.

Anne reached the top of her first mountain of success back in 1970. She found the view from the highest peak beautiful, but it was a lonely place to be and just being there somehow wasn't as satisfying as the climb to get there.

This year, Anne hopes to climb another mountain and recapture, at least in some degree, that old feeling of ex-citement and the anticipation of the view to come.

Of course, "there's no way it can be any way like the first time," says the husky-voiced former teacher from Springhill, N.S.

"In the beginning, I was really enjoying it," she says wistfully of her career which began in 1966 on a Halifax telling and not seeing anything.

All you ever see is the hotel and stage and nothing else.'

"I have people around me, lawyers, managers, produc-ers, my musicians. But they don't know what it is like to be in my place. It's lonely."
Success itself.

"It becomes clouded by money and all the things that have to be taken care of. You get so swept up in the working of it all. So messed up. So many things that are happening. I'm not laughing yet. It's still a big mess as far as I'm concerned."

"I'm getting over a hump.
In Canada right now I guess
I've reached the pinnacle. Canadian audiences know what expect so I think it is time

She says that after completing her third television special for the CBC this season-originally, the CBC wanted to do as many as eight Anne Murray specials in 1971-73 she'll concentrate her personal appearances in the United States, where "there are a lot of people to be entertained." I'll be starting over

I peaked in Canada, but not so much in the U.S. I was in demand in Canada because I was recognized in the U.S. Now, I need a new audience. Maybe what happened here will happen to me again

It's not much more than a couple of years ago that a certain musician, about to leave apost in Eastern Canada for a similar one in Victoria, found himself regarded as a bit of a kook.

Don't you realize, he was asked, that once you cross the Rockies you're dead? You disappear. You're forgotten.

Well that's the Eastern Ca-nadian viewpoint. And it may never change, Easterners never change, Easterners being a self-centered lot who feel that anything beyond Winnipeg a Canada's hin-terland.

But the word has trickled back at least as far as our mid-west provines and the word is that Victoria is where it's at, musically speaking.

A number of prominent Victoria musicians, and musical educationists have been doing examination tours in Alberta for the Western Board. Sable Island Oil Find Alarms Naturalists Sable Island, lonely strand which Alexander Graham Bell once called the "graveyard of the Atlantic," has become the scene of a hunt for oil.

The discovery of petroleum and gas on the tiny island 175 miles east of Hallfax has alarmed conservationists who may seek too have Sable named a national park.

A new exploratory well is being drilled on the isolated speck of land which measures 20 miles long and 4 miles wide. Until oil drillers reported finding oil at 5,900 feet last year, it was known as a ship's graveyard and a refuge for wild horses and seals.

"One of the world's most terrible traps for sailors," commented Dr. Bell, inventor of the telephone. He had visited Sable in 1898 and saw the hulks of ships littering the beaches and "wild ponies dashing down upon the shore into the midst of hundreds of seals."

Sable had had only about a dozen residents since the early 1900s. The population jumped to 80 when Mobile Oil of Canada sent a crew in last year to drill a test well at the western tip of the island.

The discovery of petroleum in commercial quantity would bring pressure to open the island to full-scale development. This has prompt-ed conservationists to try to have it ed conservationists to try to have it named a park or monument.

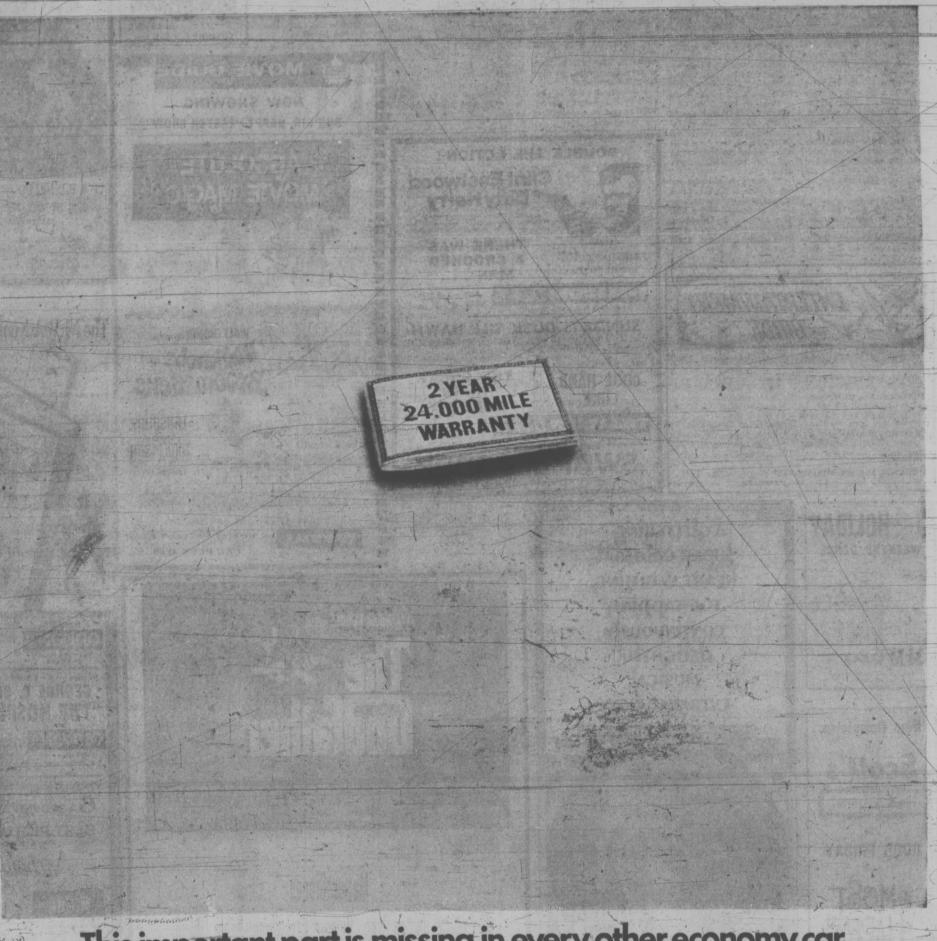

Most of the remains of the ships have been buried beneath the shifting sands over the years, but the seals and ponies are still there.

How the first horses arrived on Sable is a mystery, but they have flourished there since the 18th century, feeding on the local grasses.

ry, feeding on the local grasses.
Sable's most unique form of wildlife is the Ipswich sparrow, named after Ipswich, Mass., where it was first found.

The sparrow's nesting place was discovered along the island's thin stretch of sand, and its declining numbers on Sable may be due to erosion. Over the years, raging seas and gusting winds have eaten away at Sable's dunes.

Before the oil exploration began, said a recent report by the National Geographic Society, the main installations on Sable were a diesel stallations on Sable were a diesel electric power plant, lighthouse and a weather station. The outpost provides weather data for ships and planes shuttling between North America and Europe.

Young Children Still Laugh in Troubled Ulster, But Older Ones Accept Violence as a Way of Life

To Belfast children, the British soldier and his weapons have become a commonplace sight. Some, like the little girl at right merrily skipping past patrolling soldiers, don't yet understand the potential horror of a high-velocity weapon.

Others, like the boy at left who was caught in the act of throwing rocks at an armored vehicle, have accepted the violence of Northern Ireland. For them, stoning soldiers has replaced scrub

Fences Vs. Hedges: No Easy Decision

Whether to build a fence or grow a hedge is a question home gardeners may have to

Since it involves the aesthetic and the practical, sometimes in diametrical opposition, the decision is not easily reached.

Factors seldom considered, probably more vital than pearance, are the effects of cro-climate of the enclosed

The next consideration should be the time factor. Do we need an immediate effect or can we reasonably wait a we desire?

Property protection mands immediate results, and the only barrier that can ma-terialize in a couple of days is a constructed fence, whether or not it appeals to our senses

Such a fence is only a tem-porary fixture under any circumstances, unless built of pipes set in concrete to support heavy chain-link fencing.

The posts of a wooden fence have a life span below soil level of approximately years, and at the end of that struction will be necessary.

wisely chosen plant material can be permanent, but such a hedge will take at least five years to become established and form a partial barrier, and 10 years to make an el-fective barrier.

Since this period is about equal to the life span of a fence post, our problem is solved by building the fance. and planting the hedge be-hind. By the time the fence cumbles, the hedge will be

DESIGN IMPORTANT

For fences we have our choice of wood or wire. But if built as a sound barrier, the construction and design is of prime importance.

Wood fibres vibrate at certain sound frequencies. The longer the piece of wood without support the lower the frequencies to which it will re-

The lower frequencies are those within the range of the human ear. It has been provactually increase the volume of sounds they were intended to reduce.

Both plant material and lumber can be made into a solid barier, but this is not always a benefit.

A solid barrier impedes or distorts the natural flow of air currents and when cold air is impeded or trapped within an area we have a frost pocket. COLD POCKET

The price of a solid hedge or fence is often the loss of desirable borderline plants that had previously thrived within a garden.

Cold air naturally flows downhill, and any obstruction will cause the cold air to pile up and become colder, actually creating ground frost when surrounding areas are well above freezing.

Seashore poperties need protection from the elements rather than from intruders. Plants resistant to salt spray are not in the category nor the price range of hedge material,

Some of the observations are entertaining, to say the least. It seems children are not in the habit of pulling punches when they assess in-stitutions like B.C.'s governing body.

Here are the unabridged Greater Victoria's youth:

Ferry Riders Fume Over Long Delays

A lot of Victorians and Vancouverities spent too much time on a dank Good Friday furning in long line-ups at B.C. Ferries termi-nals and border crossings.

Motorists were waiting up to three and four hours on the Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay run, and this was with the introduction this week of the two most recently-stretched ferries, the Queen of Saanich and the Queen of Victoria, and hourly runs on a temporary summer hads.

The worst tie-up was at Horsehoe Bay, with cars backed up four miles, and this B.C. Ferries traffic manager Robert Imes at tributed to a breakdown on one of the ferries.

He said traffic was "running fight". Thursday afternoon at both Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay, but other reports indicated there were two-hour line-ups then.

Innes said similar pile-ups are not ex-pected at the end of the holiday weekend, because "it talls off over a longer period." When people take off for a holiday "they all go in one surge."

According to one harried B.C. Ferries-employee, few travellers, however, were an-noyed enough to turn back. "If you lived in B.C. very long, you get used to it, I guess."

Many, however, abandoned their cars in the terminal lots to my their luck as foot passengers. By Friday, there were some 600 cars left parked at terminals in Horseshoe Bay and Tsawassen.

The border situation was just as hectic on Friday, Southbound Canadian motorists.

on Friday. Southbound Canadian motorists were backed up about five miles north of the Peace Arch at the Blaine border crossing. Traffic fatalities through B.C. for the bolfday weekend so far have reached four, with the latest occuring early today, killing Robert Daniel Lafleur, 20, of Burnaby.

There's More to Easter Than Candy Eggs

Ron's rake had checked. He said, "I want to stay home and work in my garden."

"You can do that later," Win said. "Daddy and I will go to church and you two can start Sunday school."

Sue stopped raking. She nibbled the tail off a chocolate hen, then said, "I want to work in my garden, too."

"But you'll like Sunday school," Win told her. "You'll have a little chair to sit on, and there'll be singing and stories. Won't that be niee?"

It was plain from our daughter's face that she wasn't altogether persuaded.

I tossed in more tangible inducements. "You'll get a card with a picture on it and maybe a gold star, and a Sunday school paper to take home."

They withdrew. On the way down the hall, Ros said gloomly to his sister, "Maybe the car won't start."

The early morning rain ended, the clouds parted and the sun came out. The church was bright with spring flowers, the choir was in good voice, and the minister imparted such a clew to be parted such a glow to his message of Ressurection that we forgot to worry about how the two we'd yanked out of paganry were reacting to Sunday school.

That was years ago, but my wife and I still feel as we did then — that exposure to the religious ethic has its place in a child's education.

In matters of the spirit, be-lief can't be forced. But it's aswell if we know both sides of a story before choosing to be-lieve or reject.

As a casual Christian who believes that not one but many roads lead to the light, I'm glad we sent our children to Sunday school that Easter morning.

Students Trip Out With New Program

Ernie Harper, 25, came home to Victoria Tuesday, trailing his class behind him.

The program is aimed at helping kids who drop out of regular classes. The trip to Victoria was arranged when teachers realized from home in their lives.

"The trip on the ferry blew their minds," Harper said.

Harper's mother, Mrs. Sadie Harper, volunteered to cook for the group and free ac-commodation was arranged at Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

Teachers estimate that "everybody slept for about 20 minutes at 4 a.m. Tuesday.

"Wednesday, after touring Goldstream Park, Fort Rodd Hill, and the Provincial mu-seum, students settled down earlier. Thurs-day they visited the university and Victoria Press before heading back to Vancouver.

The kids had a great time — they probably learned a lot. If they have the good sense to stick with Ernie Harper, Rod Dunnet, Jo Campbell and Jennifer Longford, they might even learn to like learn Scores of pre-school children headed into Mount Douglas Park Thursday morning on the 19th annual Easter egg hunt sponsored by Jiminy Crickets nursery and kindergarten.

Wearing their handmade Easter hats and carrying Easter baskets, the children searched behind bushes and under tree stumps for the 1200 bundles of candy eggs that had been planted in the area.

Parents and younger brothers and sisters of the 230 Jiminy Crickets children had been invited to take part in the hunt.

Each, child was allowed five bundles of eggs. Most seemed to find their quota, and bore their goodies proudly back to show their parents and classmates.

The children made their hats and baskets earlier in the week, using everything from newspapers and paper baking cups to dyed cotton batton and paper plates.

Color My World Her Motto

By NANCY WARD Special to The Times

LONDON (FWF) - Diane Rogers has a colorful sort of DINION (FWF) — Diane Rogers has a colorful sort of life. One day she might be working with a group of stubble-chinned men, measuring the color of the hairs on their chins for a razor blade firm. The next day could find her down among great searlet, bubbling vats of lipstick, making sure that this product is exactly the right uniform and saleable shade of red.

on another day, a hospital may be her port of call, when she helps surgeons by ensuring that a section of skin to be used for grafting corresponds exactly in color to the skin next to which it will be placed.

The only girl in Britain to work a color machine, Diane travels hundreds of miles each week and visits many firms, ensuring — scientifically — that the colors they produce are uniform in shade.

uniform in shade.

The color machine's components are a series of very fine filters and sections of colored glass.

"My interest in color began when I worked — four years ago—on a project for a road research unit., I was still a university student at the time." Diane said. "I was measuring the colors of road stones. I got samples from most quarries in the country. The work was part of a scheme, still in experimental stage, for brightly colored lanes on motorways.

"When a representative from my present firm came from Salisbury to show me how the color machine worked, I was fascinated. I approached the firm and asked them for a Job after I graduated. They weren't too keen; they had never employed a girl before. But I was presistent."

The color machine came into being in 1880 when a Salisbury brewer, called Joseph Lovibond, set out to discover how to ensure that his beer would always be the same tint. Color constancy, he thought, indicated quality constancy. He worked in a little shed at the bottom of his garden. At first he used a sample of the beer itself as a standard but subsequently, impressed by the color of the stained glass windows in nearby Salisbury Cathedral, he decided that the best possible color standards would be a range of colored glasses.

He devised a series of glasses from the three primary colors — red, yellow and blue — which went, in each case, from the very pale to the very dark. Today operating in conjunction with super-line filters, the machine has a permutation of no less than nine million color combinations.

I asked Diane who so many firms found it necessary to measure the color of their products. "Quality control is a most important part of any production process," she told me, "and color control is a vital part of this. Variations in the color of a product can indicate variations in purity, composition or durability.

"It can indicate contamination, age or deterioration. We can match and record any color. Each instrument contains many permanent color filters. They eliminate guesswork. We make the glass at our own glass-blowing works."

There are international color standards and the color machine that Joseph Lovibond invented in order to ensure that his beer was just right is now used in many parts of the world to ensure that his beer was just right is now used in many parts of the world to ensure that his beer was just right is now used in many parts of the world. Russians use it to measure the color of their whale oil. In Japan, a more sophisticated version of the machine is used to detect degrees of pollution by spotting the intensity of color in various industrial components. the intensity of color in various industrial components.

In the 3½ years she has been doing the job, Diane has tested articles for color in many surprising places. "The police find the color-machine most useful," she told

They use it as an aid to forensic science. It can measure the exact colors of paint scraps and bits of fabrics when they are found after a orime. It is also used to discover whether ink used in wills or documents is exactly uniform in color. This makes it possible to discover, in cases of possible forgery, whether writing has been added later."

The teachers are still working in schools in the school division, but since December part of their lob has been the planning of the proposed elementary junior high school. Assistant superintendent of the division, Gordon Newton, said principal Bob Millman and his staff are to plan a program of education and a "philosophy" for the new school. The architects would then build a school to enhance the teachers' program. NEW, YORK (CP) — A series of short Canadian films being shown here has drawn sharp criticism from the New York Times.

"Not that all 10 of the films are bad, three are even mo-destly good," writes reviewer Roger Greenpun. "But those that are bad are very, very bad, and in ways that I had thought to have seen the last of more than a decade ago."

The films were selected by the Canadian Filmmakers Distribution Centre and were made in Montreal, Toronto, Edmonton and Vancouver, They run from two to 35 min-

"Any film series devoted to scheduling new and relatively unknown, work is likely to have its peaks and valleys."
Greenspun writes. In this connection, he says, the series may represent the bottomless abyss.

The three films that escape Greenspun's wrath are Martin Lavut's At Home, John Straiton's Animals in Motion and Conway's satiric Skin

"At Home, a study in do-mestic cliffer, succeeds through a succession of gently mounting absurdities, in be-coming a fairly funny movie," Greenspun says. Animals in Motion is a pleasant-montage of old Edward Myubridge photographs, he says, and Skin Deep displays "civilized values."

"But everything else on the program is either a life-cycle mylli and-or a moral meditation about war and industrition about war and industri-alization and similar forms of depravity, "Greenspur says.

"No fewer than four of the films end with a nuclear ex-plosion and two also manage to quote from the Apocalypse.

EDMONTON (CP) - The ability of Alberta to meet Australian competition for Kobe Beef in Japan is questionable, Dr. R. T. Berg of the University of Alberta said.

Dr. Berg, an animal science professor, said the Japanese market for Alberta specialty beef is far from being wide open and, in fact, is "beset with difficulties."

Make-or-Break Policy On Language Expected

on Quebec's explosive lan-guage question, regarded by some political observers as an issue able largely to make or break the Liberal government of Premier Robert Bourassa, will probably be formulated this year following publication of the Gendron commission of the Gendron commission report on the status of French

The Liberals, who promised during the 1970 election campaign to make French the province's working language, have so far resisted strong pressure to draw up a lan-guage policy because they were awaiting the report. The commission, set up by the previous Union Nationale government in 1969, is expected to publish the first part of its report this spring however. The complete report, should be out by the end of the year. And the government will be pressed to act by the Parti Quebecois and le Mouvement Quebec Francais, Movement for a French Quebec, formed by the PQ, labor and national-

One of the main issues in the language debate is still a controversial 1969 law giving parents the right to choose English or French as the lan-guage of instruction for their

SPARKED PROTESTS

Introduced largely to stop the French unilingualist school board in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard from halting English instruction, the bill was the object of protest demonstrations in 1969 when it was before the legisla-

Afterwards, the opposition lay dormant until last fall when education department statistics showed that eight out of nine children of immi-grants in the province were being enrolled in English schools.

Following disclosure of those statistics, the Parti Que-becois went on the attack, supported by the Movement for a French Quebec.

The separatist party organ-ized a filibuster in the naschool boards on Montreal Is-land, and the French-Quebec movement organized railies in various parts of the province.

Crux of the language problem is the Montreal region where 40 per cent of the Quebec's population is concentrated and where the major part of Quebec's English speaking minority lives.

LINKED WITH LAND

That is where French Quebec, after preserving a linguistic and cultural identity for centuries in the midst of an English-speaking, conti-nent, sees a threat of extinc-

Historically, the French-Ca-nadian identity has been closely linked with the land, and an agrarian society has been seen as the touchstone of its continued existence.

Now, as Quebec's rural population dwindles and urban centres take on increasing importance, the possibility of Montreal's becoming an Anglophone city is seen as a threat to French-Quebec as a whole, if French-Quebec is to whole, if French-Quebec is to exist as anything but a remnant in depressed rural backwaters.

The threat is two-edged.
First, French-Canadians are no longer inclined to have the large families that once ensured their continued position as the majority in Quebec. The province's high birthrate of 30.0 per thousand in 1950, mainly accounted for by the French-speaking community, has declined to 15.3 in 1970.

Second is the tendency—as evidenced in last fall's education department statistics—of immigrants to integrate overwhelmingly, into the English-speaking community.

immigrants to integrate over-whelmingly, into the Englishspeaking community, especially in Montreal, because of the mobility that a knowledge of English provides in North

The government's refusal to accept this amendment led to the filibuster which forced withdrawal of the bill.

The amendment would have required all children to go to French schools unless their mother tongue is English or schooling in English schools.

Though Parti Quebecois spokesmen emphasize that their formula would respect their formula would respect the education rights of Eng-lish-speaking Quebecers al-ready living in Quebec and of English-speaking immigrants to come, spokesmen for other parties shy away from any so-lution which would use com-pulsion to check the assimilation of immigrants into the English milieu.

Besides the education issue. the Gendron commission will have to report on Quebec's working language.

Partisans of French complain that bilingualism is required for advancement even to foreman levels in most Quebec industries. At the same time, they say, managegually English. INCOME IS LOW

They point to unreleased figures compiled by the federal bilingualism and biculturalism commision and leaked to the press in 1968 as evidence of the economic results.

The figures show that French-Canadians in Quebec had the lowest average income of any ethnic group except for Italians and Indians. At the same time, unilingual

Anglophones had the highest hearings in Montreal, how-ever, large corporations main-tained that French is already sition of French as the work-ing language would force head offices for national and international companies to move out of Montreal, taking large numbers of jobs and resulting economic activity with them. Head offices dealing with English-speaking North Amer-ica could not under any cir-cumstances switch to French as a working language, they and.

The two questions of education and the working language are expected to be the key elements in the Gendron commission's report.

41% FEWER U.K. IMMIGRANTS

OTTAWA (CP) - The United States for the first time has displaced Britain as the major source of immigration to Canada, accounting for 20 year.

Official figures released
Thursday said 24,366 of the 121,900 immigrants in 1971 were from the U.S., about the same number as in 1970.

British immigration plum-metted 41.7 per cent to 15,451 last year from about 26,500 the year before.

Acquitted

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP—Chaplain Andrew Jensen of the United States Navy was acquitted Friday night on a charge of misconduct by adul-tery. Six officer-juvors delib-erated more than two hours before returning the verdict.

The defendant's wife, Kath-leen Jensen, exclaimed "Thank the Lord," and leaned across the railing in the tiny courtroom to clasp her husband in her arms.

Jensen was thefirst chaplain to face a general court martial in U.S. naval history. He was accused by the wives of two officers who were active in his chapel program at Cecil Field Naval Air Station.

The over-all total of 121,900 immigrations—lowest s in c e 1964 —was an 18-per-cent drop from the 147,713 of 1970. The decrease again was blamed on unemployment in Canada. "The decline reflects reduced employment opportunities in Canada because of economic conditions," Immigra tion Minister Biyce Mackasey said in a statement. Strong economic conditions in most of western Europe were also a factor in reducing migration from that area."

Memories By Play

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - A few days after he finished taping a revival of Clifford Odets' Awake and Sing for the Hollywood Television Theatre. Walter Matthau was still thinking of the Depression era the play recreates.

Matthau, raised in a New York cold-water flat, said,
"The Depression—that's the only memories I have. They ment.

"It's affected my entire personality, my thinking on pragitically any subject. It has shaped me into what I am."

Matthau, winner of the Academy Award in 1966 as best-supporting actor for The For-tune Cookie and a nominee as best actor this year for Kotch, Is one of a growing list of major actors doing plays at minimum Screen Actors Guild fees for the Hollywood Televi-sion Theatre. For three Theatre: For three work on Awake and Sing, Matthau received only about $1,000, a fraction of what he would get for a film.

Awake and Sing, which also stars Felicia Farr, Ruth Storey, Martin Ritt, and Leo Fuchs, will be seen on Public Broadcasting Service Television stations. Hollywood Theatre is the only regular program of serious drama on American television

TIME TO WORK "There are lots of reasons why I did the play," said Matthau, who has not made a movie since he finished Kotch

Number one, it was time to work-you've got'to keep working at a skilled trade or you'll lose that skill.
"Number twee, if you don't work at your trade you could lose your mind.
"Number three it's a chood."

lose your mind.
"Number three, it's a good play done under ideal conditions. No commercials, no moneymen breathing down your neck."

In the den of his large, Meditergreen this home in Mediterranean-style home in Pacific Palisades, Matthau said he had not made a movie said te head not made a movie since Kotch because "I don't find anything good." "If you find something good, nobody wants to take a chance. Everyone now wants to make The French Connec-tion. Last year everyone wanted to make another Love Story. Nobody has any origi-nality."

Matthau complains that producers now think of him only for comedy roles. "The first 15 years of my dramatic career producers were saying if we could only get a Walter Matthau who could do comedy," he said. "Now they think of me as a comedian or comic or whatever."

Makes Big Move

TORONTO (CP) — When you move the Campbell household, getting there is half the fun.

Engineers have hoisted the 200-ton, 150-year-old house off its foundation and are prepared for a one-mile trip through downtown Toronto to get the former house of Sir William Campbell to its new foundation and eventually open part of it to the public. Sir Campbelli was chief justice of Upper Canada

The house, built of handmade bricks, will be moved on a triangular set of dollies with 56 wheels. To get it through downtown Torbato about 70 manholes had to be shored up, nearly a mile of transit wire had to be moved, dozens of traffic lights have to be taken down and 82 street lights have to be turned sideways.

The house was saved from wreckers by a group of law-yers who donated half the estimated $500,000 cost of reloca-tion. The rest has come in donations and government grants.

The poem is a sad reminder that some of his efforts were in vain—Susan was a heroin addict and by the time she turned to Cure for help, it was too late.

"If Cure couldn't help her,
then nothing could," Frank said, "But Susan was in the last stages of addiction when she came to us."

Cure is a charity organiza-tion devoted to the treatment of all drug addiets. It has gathered such momentum in London during the last five years that the founder, Dr. Peter Chapple, says he thinks "it's the first place an addict in trouble would turn to.

From small beginnings in 1966 in Chapple's tiny surgery, Cure progressed through Salvation Army huts and church halls to its present 14-room rehabilitätion centre on the King's Road in fashionable

This is the largest drug treatment clinic in Britain and plans are afoot to expand the institute to several other premises in London.

Not surprisingly, Cure handles more addicts than the handful of similar drug treat-ment organizations in the country, including govern-ment rehabilitation centres.

Since 1967 when Cure was registered as a charity organization, more than 1,000 patients have visited Dr. Chap-

"In recent years," he said-in an interview, "Cure has been able to record a 30-per-cent success rate with harddrug addicts. No one working in this field has been able to better this."

Last year 215 addicts and alcoholics were treated; 75 were cured—taken off drugs completely—and 25 were released on harmless drug substitutes like methodone. Four stitutes like methadone. Four ic Ocean.

Under Chapple's guidance, he has devised a narcotic withdrawal technique which if successful, can cure a hard addict within days.

"It's the apomorphine treatment," Frank explained.
"Apomorphine belongs to the morphine family but contains a sort of mental sickness element. After treatment, the addict feels totally drained of any desire to take heroin, cocaine or morphine again. The technique entails an injection of apomorphine every two hours for 96 hours.

The Reasons for a New Zoning By-Law In Saanich's present Zoning By-Law was first adopted in 1939 when the Municipality was a sparsely populated community of 16,000 persons. Today with a population exceeding 65,000. persons and pressures for continued expanding an updated Zoning By-Law is necessary. The original By-Law has been amended frequently over the past 33 years and this has led to some confusion. Hence it has been rewritten and restructured to provide citizens with a less complex document. This rewriting task has been accomplished with the dominant goal of keeping changes in standards and regulations to an absolute minimum and I would note that the new Zoning By-Law, while a legal and Legislative document is primarily an administrative technique and does not reflect major changes in Council's land use policies. Therefore property owners and residents can be assured that in general there will be no changes made to the basic zoning of their property.

Changes Between Present and Proposed Zoning By-Law

The most significent change between the present Zoning By-Law and the proposed By-Law occurs in the number of zone

The present By-Law contains a large number of individually permitted land uses, many with unique and sometimes confusing regulations attached. The pro-posed By-Law takes a more proper and legal view of land use categories.

Within the structure of the proposed Zoning By-Law all existing and anticipated land uses in Saanich can be placed in six broad categories, These are:

- 1. Rural Land Uses
 2. Residential Land Uses
 3. Commercial Land Uses
 4. Service Commercial Land Uses
 5. Industrial Land Uses
 6. Institutional and
- Public Utility Land Uses

For the purposes of clarity these broad land use categories are broken down into several sub categories. Each permits specific land uses with appropriate regu-lations and standards.

The existing pattern of land use in Saan-ich has established the form of the future community. In preparation of the pro-posed Zoning By-Law care has been taken to accommodate existing land uses in the zone categories.

The proposed By-Law is to achieve the goals set out by the Provincial Legislature by regulating the use of land; the maximum height of buildings; the degree of separation between buildings; the provision of parking and loading facilities; the provision of adequate landscaping and screening and a suitable floor space ratio and lot coverage.

in conclusion I would like to stress that a Zoning By-Law is only one method of implementing Municipal policies and decisions. It represents a short term policy statement to goide current development and should be fully reviewed from time to time in order to properly reflect changing circumstances.

It is to be hoped this information will assist in clarifying the new Zoning By-Law to come before the Public Hearing on the evening of April 11th.

DOUBLE MURDER IN VANCOUVER

VANCOUVER — The bodies of a man and a woman, bound fund and loot, were found in the batfitub of a home in the Point Grey area of Vancouver Friday night after fire extensively damaged the house.

Police said the cause of death had not been determined. The victims were described as a youngish couple.

It appreared, police said, that gasoline had been poured over the victims and inside the house, then ignited.

Neighbors said they heard an explosion that shook their houses and saw someone run from the house. The victims, neighbors said, had moved in just before the stmes and had behaved oddly, so oddly that one neighbor notified authorities. But, he said, nothing was done.

The couple had many late callers, and no lights could be seen through blankets covering the windows. But a porch light was always on.

Meanwhile, RCMP in Surrey reported they had arrested a suspect Thursday in the murders of William Tupniak, 27, and his flancee, Marylin Jean Cahers, 24.

A police spokesman said some property stolen from the Tupniak home, where the couple's bodies were discovered Tuesday, had been recovered. Other persons still are being sought in connection with the slayings.

Donald Fields, a professor at the University of British Columbia, and graduate student William T. Stanbury at the request of the federal department of Indian affairs and northern development.

The four chapters obtained

Mr. Howard said in an in-terview he will demand in the House of Commons that the government release the full report. He declined to say how he came by the four chapters he made available to

-Indians living on B.C. reserves make such "abysmally low" incomes that many don't, pay income tax.

-Rent for leasing Indian land is "regrettably" low. -The B.C. government is "not highly sympathetic" to-ward giving Indians a better deal in developing their re-

"Despite the progressive nature of the become tax the very heavy weighting of in-dian incomes in the lowest brackets has the effect of placing relatively more of the total income tax burden on low income Indiana (under $3,000) than it does upon all low income taxphyers in B.C.," the report says.

Indians are unable to develop their reserves because of lack of funds and other factors and as a result must lease their lands to non-indians who pay taxes to local authorities, the report says.

If the Indians could develop their lands themselves they would receive the taxes paid by lessees, under provisions of the Indian Act.

Under the act, Indian occupiers of reserve lands are not subject to real or personal property 'taxation' by local-authorities.

The report says as Indian band could create its own taxing jurisdiction and collect taxes now taken by local authorities.
